CONGRESSIONAL PARTY ON MAUI AND HAWAII

Delightful Visit to Kilauea and Valley Isle

(Mail Special to The Advertiser)

HAHANA, Maui, May 7.—A splendid reception was tendered the congressional party upon arrival here this afternoon. L. Weinsheimer, manager of the Pioneer plantation, and members of the Lahaina committee, undertook to show the visitors every thing there was to be seen.

The congressmen and their families visited the Lahaina plantation, the sugar plantation and other points of interest. At the Pioneer mill an observation train had been prepared for the sightseers.

Lava Under Banyan Trees
At 7 o'clock in the evening the entire party went down to a gorgeous lava under the great banyan tree in Lahaina. Over six hundred people enjoyed a magnificent feast.

The feast was a most interesting one with hundreds of incense-burners of different colors and, hidden in the branches, was an orchestra of skillful musicians who maintained the moments of the delightful spread.

Speeches were made by Representatives James B. Mann of Illinois and Representative J. A. McAdair of Indiana. Their singing remarks being interpreted by Rev. Stephen L. Deane, President for Mr. Cannon.

W. T. Rawlins, on behalf of the Lahaina of historical Lahaina, once the home of royalty, presented "Uncle Joe" Cannon with a handsome watch chain fashioned from a Hawaiian lei, mounted in gold. Accepting the token, Mr. Cannon said:

"I accept this in evidence of your friendship to me, and will keep it as a reminder of friendship to you."

Mr. Weinsheimer presided at the luncheon.

Following the feast there was dancing on an extensive platform. Every one was as merry as could be and all members of the party are enjoying good health.

Complication Is Feared
The whole party is tremendously interested in the wireless news of the torpedoing of the Lusitania and is awaiting full reports. Several expressed the opinion that further international complications might result from the general agricultural conditions of the island, and to report on the necessity and possibilities for the improvement of these conditions.

Doctor Stubbs found the sugar industry highly developed and in a prosperous condition, while all other agricultural industries were found stunted, neglected, stationary, or making a slow struggle for existence. The necessity for the establishment of an experimental station to study the problems of diversified agriculture was very evident and little time was lost to supply this need.

Good Men in Charge
Hawaii has been fortunate in the men selected to direct the work of our federal experimental station. A large amount of original investigation and work is being carried on, much of which has resulted in the establishment of fundamental principles for the maintenance of conditions and the lack of which has heretofore been one of the main obstacles to a widening out of our rich agricultural resources.

"Fourteen annual reports and eighty-five bulletins pertaining to the work of the station have thus far been issued. There can be little doubt that this fundamental work has already been far reaching in its influence upon Hawaiian agriculture."

"Some of the results achieved have been the demonstration of the possibilities of growing superior tobacco; feeding values and utilization of agave beans when ground into meal; correlation of manganese with the yellowing of pineapple plants; the fact that plants take up their nitrogen as ammonia as well as in the form of nitrate; the introduction of new grasses and fodder plants, cottons and rice, and the development of new strains."

Swimming Tournament
In the evening a swimming tournament and exhibitions by Duke Kahanamoku were held at Punahou, while the arena could have been flooded over for dancing. The arrangements at both these affairs were excellent and both the swimming and the dancing, in such unusual surroundings, were appreciated to the limit.

This evening the party dined under the great Lahaina banyan and then proceeded to Maui. Every minute on Maui this has been delightful.

A party of six, led by Congressman Mann, ascended Haleakala last night, making the trip safely and returning untroubled with the glories of sunrise at the summit.

Party At Napoosoo
Eben S. Cunningham, chief clerk in the office of the secretary of Hawaii, received yesterday the following wireless message from Secretary Wade Warren Thayer, from Napoosoo, Kona, Hawaii: "Arrived at Napoosoo. All well. Send me 100 telegrams to the Hilo Hotel.—THAYER."

(By Mutual Wireless to The Advertiser)

HILO, May 9.—Keen indignation has been aroused among members of the congressional party on account of the torpedoing of the great liner Lusitania by the consequent staggering loss of life. Unofficial expressions of intense condemnation of the act of war have been voiced by senators and representatives now visiting the islands. They are prepared for a call to a special session of congress is evident, though they all declare that they hope the exigencies of the situation will not demand that their Hawaiian itinerary shall be interfered with. They hope to be able to complete the trip among the islands mapped out for them.

Detailed information concerning the sinking of the Lusitania is awaited with lively interest and the congressmen are especially concerned as to what the attitude of Washington will be with reference to the tragedy in Irish waters. Immediate Session Probable.

It is realized that an immediate session of congress is probable, and that some legislation is necessary to cover a situation where it is dangerous for Americans to cross the Atlantic.

According to present plans, a portion of the party sails from Honolulu for San Francisco aboard the S. S. Wulhelmina on Wednesday, May 19, the hoped they would investigate closely in order to see what we are doing and what are our problems that require help.

Following this most interesting meeting, luncheon was served in the Wai-lake armory, after which the start was made for Lahaina.

At ten o'clock a special train took the visitors to Hilo, where the home-spreaders entertained them. A splendid luncheon was served in the Hilo armory, with pianettes in every possible form, from snails to drinks, as specialties.

Following the luncheon there was an exhibition of wrestling by Japanese boys, their little bodies standing stoutly against the heaviest of forms that formed the wrestling ring. The little shape gave a good exhibition, thoroughly enjoyed because of its absolute novelty.

Rev. Craig Bowditch presided at the speaking part of the gathering, the local speakers being W. L. Wells, president of the Hilo Farmers' Association and Professor Kraus, while a reply was made by Senator Robinson of Arkansas.

Professor Kraus' address was very much to the point. He said, among other things:

"In 1901, soon after annexation, there was established the Hawaii Agricultural Experiment Station. A year previous the office of experiment stations of the United States had been authorized to send its agent, Dr. W. C. Stubbs, to Hawaii to investigate the general agricultural conditions of the islands, and to report on the necessity and possibilities for the improvement of these conditions."

Doctor Stubbs found the sugar industry highly developed and in a prosperous condition, while all other agricultural industries were found stunted, neglected, stationary, or making a slow struggle for existence. The necessity for the establishment of an experimental station to study the problems of diversified agriculture was very evident and little time was lost to supply this need.

According to present plans, a portion of the party sails from Honolulu for San Francisco aboard the S. S. Wulhelmina on Wednesday, May 19, the balance taking passage aboard the S. S. Sonoma on the day following. The members realize, however, that there is the possibility of their pleasant trip being cut short and that the stay on this island may have to be abbreviated and the visit to Kona eliminated.

Messages relative to the emergency have passed between the congressmen here and members of the congressional party who remained in Honolulu, and mainland messengers have been exchanged. All anxiously await further information.

Volcano Behaves Well At Night
HILO, Hawaii, May 9.—Promptly on schedule time, the congressional party, many of them somewhat tired, but everybody happy, reached the Volcano House at 6 o'clock last evening. Dinner awaited the eager attack of appetites made keen by the long automobile drive.

A glow of the fiery pit on the clouds gave promise of the biggest wonder of the trip and after dinner many of the travelers took auto down into the crater, to the edge of Halemau-man. It proved a subject of surprise, remark that so excellent a road should lead to the very threshold of the lake of lava. The thrills of the ride to the edge of Halemau-man, from the Volcano House, were thoroughly enjoyed, the exclamations of delight being more numerous as the abode of Pele was hewn at nearer and nearer.

Halemau-man, the boiling cauldron of molten rock, behaved splendidly, giving an exhibition of activity calculated to show a large proportion of the stirring stunts of which Hawaii's safety valley is capable.

Happy But Strenuous Day
Not all the party went to the crater last evening, a large number saving the wonderful spectacle for a daylight view today. Some were more inclined to retire early, after the pleasant but strenuous experiences of the eventful day. Napoosoo had been reached early in the morning from Maui, and a visit to Captain Cook's monument, across Kilauea Bay, was made by those who wished to set eyes on the shaft that honors the memory of the great explorer whose bones were left on the island.

Luncheon was served at Kealahou and a start was made at noon for the cross-island trip.

The run through the beautiful Kona district was much enjoyed and the congressional party, across the island, something of the coffee industry and get a glimpse of cattle country. Crossing the great lava flows was an experience in itself and the interested trippers asked many questions concerning the history of these immense deposits.

Tea Served in Waiohinu
Afternoon tea was served at Waiohinu, as each car arrived, after which the run was resumed past Naelele village down to Honouliuli port, through the fields of Pihale, then up the slope of Mauna Loa, through the lush forest and over the lava fields to the Volcano House.

Many expressions of delighted wonder were born of the trip to Kilauea Volcano.

The lava flows crossed on the way, the inspiring sight of the flaming pit itself, the comfort of the Volcano House, the marvels in the way of rock and lava formations, ferns, sulphur beds and steam craters, all brought out exclamations of praise and pleasure.

The registers of the hotel were the recipients of a lot of written opinions, and those who wrote also desired to read. They found the names of scores of prominent people, statesmen, diplomats, some of whom they knew, and the library of worshipful testimonials to the miracles of nature was added to by many of the senators, representatives, members of their families and their new friends made in the islands.

Souvenirs of the visit to the home of Pele were eagerly sought, bits of lava rock and whips of "Pele's hair" being collected with keen appreciation.

Daylight View of Kilauea
This morning a considerable party went to the pit for a daylight view of Kilauea. The company included some of those who had visited the lava lake last night. They wanted to see the supreme sight again. Besides, they wished to see in daylight what they had been unable to see at night. They desired to get a view of the pit's surroundings.

"Today has been arranged, as much as possible, as a day of rest. The gentlemen of the Hawaii committee, looking after the welfare of the many visitors, wisely anticipated the wish of some of the members of the party to rest after the rapid succession of pleasant excursions since going aboard the S. S. Mauna Kea at Honolulu last Wednesday night. But excursions to all the main points about the Volcano are being made by small parties."

The congressional party is visiting the Volcano at a particularly interesting time, because there has been a distinct rise in the lava of Halemau-man, "the house of everlasting fire," and the rise is expected to continue. It is reported at the technology station that at this season, in the early part of
